

Course description template Fundamentals of Criminology and Punishment

Course description

This course deals with the study of the criminal phenomenon, starting with defining the concept of criminology and explaining its topic, which is defining the meaning of crime and the concept of the criminal in criminology studies. The course includes a statement of theories to explain the criminal phenomenon, and an explanation of the factors driving the commission of the crime

On the other hand, the course deals with what is related to the social reaction to crime, which requires acquaintance with the penal and philosophical schools in the field of penology, as well as acquaintance with the forms of criminal punishment, its purposes, and the problems related to its application. The course includes a statement of the systems and types of penal institutions, methods of punitive implementation, treatment within penal institutions, and means of care following punitive implementation
